Mrs. SNOWDEN.—The following is selected from the New York Morning Chronicle. Duane says the Editor of this paper is under the particular patronage of Mr. Burr. Be it so. Nevertheless, the sarcastic wit in this performance is not thereby lessened; and I defy the hardiest Jeffersonian, who can relish genuine humour, to read it without a smile, though he may heartily curse his fate and that of his friends for paucity of genius. You will please me, and I believe many of your Subscribers, by giving it a place in the Advertiser. A. Z.

A TRAVELLER'S TALE.

Among other circumstances recorded in the journal of Shing-hu, the Chinese traveller, is the following account of a nation, thro' which he passed in his Asiatic wanderings.

"From the manners of the people (says he) I am inclined to think they have but partially emerged from a state of barbarism. They still evince that distrustful and hostile disposition towards each other, that characterizes man in a savage state.

"All are ambitious of attaining posts of honor and profit; but it is curious to observe the means they use to effect their desires. With us in China, the man who wishes for public distinction, endeavours to deserve it by his virtues and services.

"The great Bang-ho, when he was a candidate for the office of Cock-e-nee, was remarkable for the propriety of his demeanor and the grandeur of his action. Three times a day did he proceed to the Great Pagoda, to rub his nose on the toe of the immortal Ki. His steps were slow and his look demure; his hair plaited with great exactness, and perfumed with oil of co ki, descended from the crown of his head, and being of the length of many feet was supported by several youths of modest deportment.

"The passenger was saluted from his windows with showers of gold leaf, mingled with sweet scented flowers, and often drenched with a delightful deluge of rose water. The beggar who applied at his gate was saluted with courteous words, and a horn of oil poured on his head. He went away hungry indeed in belly, but [illegible] of the great Bang-ho. Thus did this great man by his good offices, obtain the esteem of his countrymen, and was elected to the important office of Cock-e-nee, amid the general acclamations of China.

"In this country, however, matters are conducted in a different style. Those who wish to rise, endeavour to do so at the expence of others. They make great outcry about their honesty, their integrity and their patriotism—things which we are content to practise in China. By their language, one would think those virtues are but scarce among them, since they are made the subject of so much boasting.—They remind me of the tradesmen in the kingdom of Tush, who hang out a flag at their doors, on which is written, "The only honest trader in town."

"No sooner is a man in power, than it immediately becomes the business of his rivals to turn him out; and it is surprising with what impudence and cunning they go to work. His best words and actions are twisted into treason; and for the ingenuity they discover in perverting the truth, I believe they could even turn the doctrines of the immortal Confucius into blasphemy.

"It is the custom here, for the people to drink after their meals little cups of an exhilirating beverage, accompanying the draught with some appropriate sentiment. It happened some time since, on a certain festival day, that one of their principal mandarines being called on for a sentiment or TOAST, as it is termed, gave, "a union of all honest men."

"The news spread in every direction; the rogues of the nation assembled in clusters at every corner, they lifted up their hands, they rolled their eyes, and they gnashed their teeth; they raised a hue and cry throughout the streets, at the man who would thus establish a union so destructive to their interests. They repaired in a troop to a dreary den, where dwelled the dark looking Cheat lu. His countenance was black as the thunder cloud; and his eyes scowled venemously around.

"This curious, half human animal, was a painter by trade, and employed his time in daubing hideous distorted caricatures of such persons as, by the nobleness of their appearance, attracted his envious attention; and for these caricatures he was well paid by every man who wished to see his neighbor in a deformed point of view.

"To him the worthy troop hastened, breathless with consternation, and related the dreadful toast that still rung in their ears. They desired a caricature of the offender, finished in the most hideous manner that Cheat-lu could devise.

"The monster grinned a ghastly smile, and turning round to one of the troop, who was among his chief favourites, chucked him under the chin with his dirty paw, and assented to the proposal.—The favourite, whose name I cannot recollect, but the meaning of it in Chinese is Nin com poop-hi, made a most obsequious bow, and declared upon his honor, (Chinese FUDGE) that he should ever consider himself under the greatest obligations for such condescension. The caricature was finished; the troop yell'd forth their approbation in wildest rapture; they opened their pockets to the IN famous Cheat-lu; who kindly deigned to take from them a slight compensation.

"The caricature was handed about the streets, the highway, and the market places; many who had never seen the true countenance of the mandarin, learned to curse him from this distorted representation.

"There were still some who maintained that this was not a caricature. With respect to these, they employed certain persons called mud-tossers, to throw dirt in their eyes, in order to make them see clear; and if they still cried out that the hideous portrait was no likeness, they beat them over the head with clubs to keep them quiet.

"In short, the troop employed their painter again, and directed him to paint the countenances of all these refractory people in the blackest colours. Cheat-lu seized his brush with avidity, and went on daubing and daubing, till he so far overshot his mark, that he daubed himself and his employers into detestation and contempt."

These, and a number of other singular customs, are recorded in the journals of the venerable Shing-fu.

FROM THE NEW YORK EVENING POST.

Candid Acknowledgements—The editor of the National Ægis has again attempted to elevate himself above his fellow labourers in the cause of democracy, by a second effort to appear just and independent. In high terms he professes a willing admiration of Mr. Morris' talents and eloquence, and promises to furnish his readers with extracts from his last speech. But how long Mr. Blake will continue in ths mind, is somewhat uncertain: We hope he will publish those extracts at once before the cold fit comes on, and some new evidence appears, as in the case of Mr. Rutledge, and compels him to retract his opinion. "The acute & discriminating Duane" will, probable, be dissatisfied, and then this handsome specimen of his liberality may give place to the conviction that the first notion was erroneous. Least this should happen therefore, we hasten to give him credit for his candor whilst it is yet in our power.

FROM THE NATIONAL ÆGIS.

Governeur Morris. We are always ready to render our tribute of respect, to splendid talents and superior genius, whether found among the friends or the enemies of the cause we have espoused. We do not hesitate to offer our opinion, that the speech of Mr. MORRIS on Mr. Ross's resolutions, is the most finished specimen of eloquence, which has ever been exhibited in the annals of American legislation. We doubt whether the records of the British Parliamentary debates can display any thing superior in brilliancy of thought, and elegance of language. We regret that the narrow limits of a weekly paper will render it impracticable to publish the speech at large. In our next we shall present some extracts, from which the reader may judge of the talents of this distinguished statesman.

We don't want to tease Mr. Blake, but we cannot help hinting to him that if he will just turn back to his paper of [February 17, 1802, he will find Mr. Morris's talents spoken of in a very different style. This is the manner in which the writer of that day sneers at the speech of Mr. Morris on the Judiciary Bill:

"At one moment he is solemn, dignified, and majestic, the next he is sportive, familiar, and facetious. In one breath he talks most learnedly of Alfred and England, of Greece and Rome; in the next, the gravity of the Senator is discarded, and he prattles most humorously about the agility of a post boy. In one sentence he vaunts of his resolution to protect the Constitution from unhallowed hands; in the next he descends to light and quibbling criticism about shall and may"

But now when Mr. Morris has lost his seat in the Senate & is no longer to be feared there, his eloquence and his superior talents are readily admitted. Even Mr. Randolph declared on hearing Mr. Morris's last speech, that it was a pity such great talents should be suffered to go thus prematurely into retirement. At any rate, these people take care that their compliments should be well timed.

NEW YORK, May, 10

The ship Franklin, Townsend of Salem, arrived at Martha's Vineyard from Calcutta on the 3d instant. She left the Cape of Good Hope on the 8th March, and brings the following important information:

"The Cape of Good Hope was given up to the Dutch on the 21st February, at which time the troops of the Batavian Republic took possession, to the great joy of the inhabitants. The English Government, it appears, had sent out new orders after the former ones to retain it; but the frigate had a long passage, so that the British troops had held possession from the first of January to the 21st February. They had mostly embarked for India before the Franklin sailed; notwithstanding which, the British Commanders, at the time they left the Cape, said they expected a new war in Europe, and wished they had retained possession."

Captain Townsend saw at the Cape the ship Rolla from Calcutta, which had spoken the Concord, Carnes, of Salem, a short time before, near Sumatra. Passed at New Port the ship Mount Hope, from the Isle of France deeply loaded.

We have had here this week the most continued gales of wind at this season of the year that have been known for many years. The storm began on Monday evening, and still continues. Monday night, Tuesday and Tuesday night it blew almost a huricane. The wind has been all the time at N. W. We fear much damage has been done at sea near these islands; but are happy to say no vessels have been wrecked on our rocks during the tempestuous weather.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.

Extract of a letter from Bordeaux, dated 23d March, per Atlantic, Penrose.

"They write from London, as if a war was certain—such intelligence you may reasonably suppose has enhanced the value of sugar and coffee; indeed the speculations seem confined to those two articles. The English funds have fallen 15 per cent. the French 8 per cent. Our underwriters have suspended taking any new risks, and it is reported that the insurance at Lloyd's has got up to 5 guineas from London to Bordeaux.

What will be the result of this agitation, it is difficult to ascertain; it is however pleasing to learn, that matters between Spain and America are amicably adjusted, and Bounaparte has signified to Mr. Livingston his intention of having all American claims paid with full satisfaction for the delay.

Orders are issued to the different capt. general and administrators of Gaudaloupe, Tobago and St Lucie, to draw no more bills on France. Government has allotted two millions per month for the service of the colonies."

An Important Diſcovery.

Any gentleman, merchant or farmer, of character and good property, who is a ci- t zen of the United States, has it now in his power to ſecure to himſelf the exclu- ſive patent right in one of the moſt im- portant and generally uſeful diſcoveries to ſociety, that perhaps has been yet offered to the notice of the public in any country, and thereby ſecure in an honorably and highly uſeful manner, a ſplendid addition to his fortune.

The leading objects of this diſcovery, are the preſervation of wheat and all kind of ſmall grain, by which they will pre- ſerve ſound and unaltered for two years, impervious to the ravages of vermin and animalcule of every kind, now known to deſtroy them in ſuch quantities.

Secondly, The preſervation of animal and vegetable ſubſtances, either in their natural or a cooked ſtate, (particularly in the latter way) by which theſe ſubſtances will keep ſound and unaltered, for years, without danger of waſte or diminution, (if properly kept) ſuſceptible by different eaſy modes of preparation of bearing the tran- ſitions of every climate, and becoming an important object of trade in the ſupply of our fleets, armies and trading ſhips, as well as thoſe of other nations, but eſpecially calculated to meet a ready and profitable ſale at the Weſt India and Spaniſh mar- kets.

Thirdly, A ſimple, eaſy and economi- cal mode of increaſing the food of ſheep, horſes and horned cattle, by which theſe uſeful animals may be cheaply and abun dantly ſupplied againſt the inclement ſea- ſon of winter and ſcarce one of ſpring. The farmers and landed intereſts are parti- cularly intereſted in the ſpeedy and gene ral application of this very uſeful and im portant diſcovery; the intereſt in which will be diſpoſed of on fair and honorable terms, without danger of fraud or impo- ſition to the purchaſer.

For further information, apply to the ſubſcriber, either perſonally or by letter poſt paid, addreſſed to him at Mr. John Bogg's, Lexington.

Alexandria Advertiser.

FRIDAY, MAY 13.

Died at Philadelphia, half after 11 o'clock on Monday night, General STE- VENS THOMSON MASON, one of the ſenators repreſentaive of the ſtate o Virginia, in the Congreſs of the Unite States. General Maſon had arrived in that city on Tueſday laſt for medical aſ- ſiſtance in a dropſical complaint; but the diſeaſe had arrived at too malignant a ſtate to ſubmit to the ſkill of the faculty, or the power of medicine.

The Virginia Telegraphe ſays "That Major Thomas Lewis, The federal candi- date for Congreſs has a large majority of votes in the diſtrict compoſed of the coun- ties of Greenbrier, Botetourt, Rockbridge, Monroe and Kenawha; but we underſtand his democratic opponent, Andrew Moore, Eſq. ſcruples the purity of the polls and deſigns purging them."

A letter from Bordeaux, to a merchant in Philadelphia, dated 23d March, 1803, ſays I have the pleaſure to inform you that this government has notified to the agents of American claimants, that the whole of their certified demands ſhall be paid without delay, with intereſt from the period at which they were incurred to the day of payment. The ſame letter ſtates that couriers extraordinary had been juſt diſpatched to all the courts of Europe.

DEMOCRATS.—We beg permiſſion to point out to the Federal editors every where the following paragraph from the Aurora of April 27; appearing in that paper, which we do know is under the ex- preſs controul of Mr. Jefferſon, we are to preſume it is in perfect coincidence with his own opinion and wiſhes:

"The federaliſts have a happy verſatili- ty. What the next name will be by which they expect to cull the people, is uncertain—Perhaps in the Spirit of Para- dox—honeſt men! If democrat did not denote an exiſting triumphant party, they probably would now uſurp this denomina- tion; but they are on the look out for a name that will embrace Mr. Burr's uni- on of all honeſt men, and ſhould this fail them, they will certainly endeavor to ouſt the emocrats of their name, in the hope thereby to ouſt them of the Government."

We fancy Duane is a little miſtaken here in his ſuppoſition that the Federaliſts will ever attempt to change their name for that of Democrats; but ſince he is now ſo open and explicit in the wiſh that the name may belong excluſively to his own party, we ſincerely hope that in this wiſh he may not be balked. We therefore take the liberty of ſubmitting it to the conſideration of the Federal editors throughout the U. States, whether it would not henceforth be well to ſpeak of our opponents under no other name than that of Democrats. The appellation of Jacobins which is ſometimes made uſe of, particularly at the Eaſtward, is both too offenſive to obtain currency as a univer- ſal name, and, excepting as to the leaders of the party, unjuſt; the appellation of republican is claimed in common by both parties, and therefore is not in the leaſt diſcriminative: whereas democrat being the name taken by themſelves, and liable to no objection on our part, is that which alone ſhould be uſed when ſpeaking or writing of our political opponents.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The public are cautioned to be careful in the receipt of counterfeit GOLD TEN DOLLAR PIECES of the United States, as many are in circulation of the date of 1795. The counterfeits may on examination be eaſily diſcovered by attending to the following particulars:—The head is badly executed, being much larger than the real piece—the ſize of the metal is alſo larger—in the word United, the letter U is clumſy, and in the word Liberty, the letter B is perceptibly lower than the I and the E in the word States, there is alſo a great deficiency in the letter S being conſiderably lower than the foregoing letters of the word. Balt. pap.

FROM A LONDON PUBLICATION.

It appears from ſome experiments made by M. E. Walker, that cauſtic inſtru- ments may be conſtructed for converſing at a diſtance, without aſſiſtance of tubes to convey the ſound, "Ex. 1 I took a deal rod, ſixteen feet long, and about an inch ſquare, and, after having fixed one end of it into the ſmall end of a ſpeaking rumpet, I laid it upon two props, in an horizontal poſition. One of the props was placed under the trumpet, about three inch es from its wide end, and the other prop was placed near the other end of the rod, another ſpeaking trumpet was then laid acroſs the rod, about three inches from the end. The wide part of the trumpet reſted upon the rod, but the other end was ſuſ pended by a ribband. The apparatus thus adjuſted, I introduced a watch into the end of the trumpet, and, applying my ear to this croſs—trumpet, I heard beats much louder than if the watch had been at the diſtance of a few inches only. The ſound appeared to come out of the croſs trumpet although the diſtance was ſeventeen feet and a half; and when it was laid into the croſs trumpet, it was heard equally well at the end trumpet. Ex. 2. My aſſiſtant in theſe experiment being ſeated at one end of the trumpet, and myſelf at the other, a con- verſation took place through this apparatus, but in whiſpers too low to be heard thro' the air at that diſtance. When the ear was placed in a certain poſition, the words were heard as if they had been ſpoken by an inviſible being within the trumpet and the ſound was more diſtinct, ſofter, and more muſical, than if they had been ſpoken through the air." Mr. Walker, in- fers from theſe experiments, that if a com- munication were made on this principle be- tween a ſhop or a ware-houſe, and the dining room, &c. it might contribute to the diſpatch of buſineſs; and inſtruments might be formed on the ſame principle, and introduced between the parlour and ſer- vants' hall, ſo that the directions, might be given to a domeſtic without his enter- ing the room, and in whiſpers too low to diſturb the company.

"The war-whoop," the democrats ſay, "ſhould not be forgotten." Some of the more modeſt do not wiſh to ſay that there is a party in the United States fond of war; but hint it as probable; and fur- ther that the object is the ſubverſion of the government. Do the democrats judge the motives of the federaliſts to be the ſame as thoſe which governed the par- ty in oppoſition to the meaſures of Waſhington, at the period when the cruiz- ers of England moleſted our commerce? Did that party then clamor for war, for the purpoſe of ſubverting the government? We think it not improbable. As to war however, no federaliſt wiſhes for it, un- leſs the honor and rights of our country demand a reſort to the meaſure. But that ſuch efficient ſteps ſhould have been taken, as would have rendered negociation more advantageous than it will probably now prove to this country, it will readily be admitted was the wiſh of every honeſt federaliſt. [Charls. Courier.
